SOLDIER BOY IS KILLED ACCIDENTALLY

TRAGEDY AT LONDON WHILE CELEBRATING DEFENSE DAY

Bullet From 45 Calibre Automatic Entered Head As He Leaned Out of Armory Window—Young Man Died In Mt. Carmel Hospital Without Regaining Consciousness—No Arrests Will Be Made.

Bertram Brown, 19, son of Delmar Brown, of London, died at three o'clock Saturday afternoon in Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, from bullet wounds inflicted by a fellow member of Co., C, 166th infantry, O. N. G. at 10:30 July Fourth, in the London armory.

Brown, a "doughboy" in Co. C, turned out for the Defense day muster Saturday morning. After the assembly had been dismissed, Brown was on the third floor of the armory and heard shots being fired outside. He went to a window, leaned out to learn the source of the shots, and a bullet from a 45 caliber automatic revolver, such as are used by the militia, entered his head.

He was rushed to Mt. Carmel hospital, but aid given him there failed to save his life.

Captain H. C. Shough, commanding officer of Co. C, and Lieutenant Albert Rankin, second in command, investigated a report that William Gallagher, another member of the company, was discharging his automatic revolver into the air from a second floor window of the armory. None of the members of the company was placed under arrest, but officers from Adjutant General Henderson's office ordered an investigation of the shooting.

Brown died before regaining consciousness and no statement about the accident could be obtained from him. The young man's promotion to the grade of corporal just had been announced at the Defense day muster formation.

An official report of the shooting was filed Saturday by Captain H. C. Shough, commander of the Co., with Adjutant General Henderson at Columbus, in which the shooting was found to be accidental.

The official report stated that the board of investigation ordered by the adjutant general's office and composed of Captain Shough, Lieutenants Albert Rankin and Charles Morcher of company C, and Dr. H. V. Christopher London, had determined that young Brown was fatally shot when Sergeant William Gallagher fired his 46 calibre automatic pistol into the air from the second floor of the company armory and one of the bullets struck Brown in the head as he leaned from a window on the third floor.

The report stated that all testimony indicated an entirely accidental shooting. Gallagher fired several shots into the air from the second floor and then cleaned his gun. Brown was not discovered until some minutes later.

No arrests have been made an none will be made, Captain Shough stated.

His report was sent to Columbus and he said that a board of inquiry by officers from the adjutant general's office will go to London within the next day or two to conduct a complete investigation of the affair.

Sergeant Gallagher reported the incident in detail to the local board of investigation and is prostrated with grief over the fatal shooting.

Brown was a model soldier and had just been promoted to a corporal. He was given a full military funeral Monday at 2 o'clock at the residence, with burial near London. He is survived by his parents and one brother, Eugene, 14.

The reservoir project will be celebrated July 13 when people from all over the state will gather.

DIED SUDDENLY

Mrs. Deborah Taylor Succumbed to Heart Trouble —Funeral at Frankfort.

Mrs. Deborah Miranda Taylor died at the home of her son, Ira Taylor, on Lovers' Lane, Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

The deceased was a resident of Greenfield and was getting ready for her return home when she was suddenly stricken with heart trouble and died before a doctor could reach the home.

Mrs. Taylor was born November 9, 1851 and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Barkley. She was married to Alexander Taylor, who died several years ago.

The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church at Frankfort Monday morning. Interment was in the Frankfort cemetery.

PORTSMOUTH MAN HURT AS CARS COLLIDE

Robert Crahan, of Portsmouth, was severely injured this morning in an auto collision on the Columbus pike at the Walnut creek crossing. The accident occurred about 8:30 o'clock.

Stanley Glick was coming south driving a Buick truck and Mr. Crahan in a Dodge car, accompanied by his brother, Robert, were driving north. The two cars met at the crossing, the Buick rammed the Dodge throwing Robert Crahan against the windshield. The skin of his face on the left side was cut into shreds and he sustained a severe cut extending from his neck below the right ear up to his nose. Another severe cut is just over and back of his right ear, barely missing that member and exbroken part. I'm this gray world's Courtright dressed the young lad's wounds.

The Crahans are connected with the Portsmouth Gas company. The injured boy was removed to Mt. Carmel hospital in Albaugh's ambulance.

UNDERWENT OPERATION.

Miss Vivian Hudnell, who is taking a course in train nurse work at Grant hospital, Columbus, underwent an operation for the removal of her tonsils Friday. Her mother and Miss Mae Hundell, were present.

AUTOMOBILE WAS WRECKED IN THIS CITY

J. F. Courtney Badly Injured About Face--Car Destroyed by Fire.

A seven passenger Richenbacker touring car bound from Columbus to Portsmouth skidded Sunday afternoon on the Kingston pike near Ohio street, turned clear around, fell over and turned upside down in a ditch.

In the car was the owner, Stewart Dutoit, and three other men, two of these were pinned under the car and by a superhuman effort, Mr. Dutoit, assisted by one of his companions, lifted the wrecked car off the two men and released them, but none too soon, as the car was soon a mass of flames and was completely destroyed.

The rear and spare tires were burned to a crisp and one of the men in the car, J. F. Courtney, of Columbus, was badly injured about the face. His left ear was nearly torn from his head, and had to be sewed on. The other men escaped with slight injuries. Dr. Courtright was the attending physican.

After going to the doctor's office, they saw the sign of the Smithhisler's shoe store and they called up Mr. Smithhisler, whom they knew, and he took them to their home in Columbus.

A mean feature was the stealing of different portions of the machine. The wrecked auto had hardly cooled off before it was stripped of all valuable parts.

"LIGHT OF THE CROSS."

Lakeside, July 6, (UP). — The "Light of the cross" has come to the shores of Lake Erie. Beams from a big white revolving cross will flash out over Lake Erie nightly from this point.

The beacon, 10 feet high, is mounted on the dome of the pavillion of the famous Methodist resort at the main docks. Twenty-eight large electric beacon lights were used in its construction.

The cross is in memory of the late Arthur B. Jones, former secretary of Lakeside association, who devoted the last years of his life to developing this Methodist resort.

The cross was dedicated Monday night.

FORD HIT FORD PASSENGERS BADLY HURT

Accident Happened at Leistville Crossroads—Cars Almost Demolished.

In a collision of a Ford truck and a Ford touring car, near Leistville at the intersection of the Adelphi and the Zanesville road, better known as the Maysville pike, Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock several people sustained severe injuries.

In the truck were William Canfield, W. McMorrow, George Nothstine and Russell Daubenmyer, of South Perry. The first named sustained a severe gash in the back of his head and also two of his ribs were broken, but his companions escaped injury.

The occupants of the touring car were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Angles and children; Coral, Margaret and James. The children escaped injuries but their parents were not so fortunate. Mr. Angles suffered a deep cut on the head and concussion of the spine. He had to be carried to the home of Ferd Dumm near the scene of the wreck where he remained until he could be removed to his home in Wellston.

His wife was severely cut about the head. Her left shoulder dislocated and her collar bone was broken. Dr. G. W. Heffner, of this city, was called and attended to their injuries.

When the two cars came together, they hit with such force that both gas wagons were piled up in a heap against a pole alongside of the road and the pole was broken off by the impact. William Canfield, who was riding in the rear of the truck was thrown over the fence into a cornfield.

An ambulance from Wellston took the injured people to their home. People from Laurelville on their way home gave the injured people of the truck a lift, and took them home.

DANGEROUS CURVES TO BE ELIMINATED.

The way will be open July 10, when the Hopley bill goes into effect for the state highway department to condemn land for straightening highways already constructed and abolishing bidding bonds on state work. According to the Ohio Good Roads Federation, there are a number of dangerous curves on highways built several years ago and the highway department has been without authority to condemn land needed in the elimination of these curves in maintenance work. The new law also provides, the Federation says, that bidders at state highway lettings must file certified checks with their bids.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity
Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide
(1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
(2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
(3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.
This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.
Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

MOTHER BOASTS IDEAL DAUGHTERS

Never Spanked or Scolded Them—Brought Them Up "Simply."

Augusta, Me.—This city boasts two good little girls who are still unspanked, are never scolded and whose mother is rearing them on the theory that a child is entitled to the same consideration, dignity and courtesy as any grown-up visitor to the home.

They are Miss Jean Abbott, seven years old, and Miss Carol Abbott, who is five. Their mother is Mrs. Grace P. Abbott, daughter of William R. Pattangall, the Democratic candidate for governor of Maine last year.

Mother's ideas on child culture are quite satisfactory and should be extensively adopted. Miss Jean and Miss Carol solemnly assured the reporter who interviewed them. They are remarkably demure young ladies, with quiet assurance far beyond their years. Both are accomplished housekeepers. Their innocent knowledge of life and its mysteries is startling, to say the least.

Plan Own Affairs.

Jean has been able to build a fire and get breakfast since she was four years old, and now Carol can do the same. They plan their own affairs, make their own social engagements with their young friends and go about things generally like regular "grown-ups."

Self-reliance and responsibility are the foundation stones for her interesting theories on the training of children, Mrs. Abbott explained. In fact, she doesn't believe in training at all, for she regards experience and example as the only satisfactory teachers for any human being of ordinary intelligence, whatever the person's age may be.

Those who quote: "Spare the rod and spoil the child," and who consider "children should be seen and not heard" as among the wisest of the old copybook maxims, are not on Mrs. Abbott's visiting list at all. "Because the accident of birth has made one the parent of a child," she said, "does not give one the right to strike that child or to attempt by force and coercion to mold that little body and developing mind to the parent's will.

School System Wrong.

"I think our school system and our conventional ideas on the rearing of children are all wrong. Perhaps I am all wrong, but I am willing to rest my case on the success of my ideas on guiding my own little girls."

The questions Jean and Carol ask are always answered truthfully, and in words their minds can grasp, Mrs. Abbott said. Their greatest ambition is to grow up to be clever, healthy women and to have homes of their own and big families. They are never told they mustn't eat this or do that. The simple truth about the effect on their health of the wrong diet and on their character and future of unwise actions is all that is needed to secure the desired results, their mother declared.

A reporter, who spent several hours with Jean and Carol in their home and elsewhere in Augusta, was amazed by their simple and unaffected manner, their quiet assurance and dignity, their quaintly "grown-up" conversation and their gentle, well-modulated voices.

They play outdoors just as hard as any other children in the neighborhood and get just as much fun out of their dolls and toys. "It's all very simple," explained a neighbor; "Jean and Carol are such good little girls and they never need to be spanked or scolded." But their mother insists it is just the other way around.

Heligoland Is Melting Before Blows of Waves

Hamburg.—The shores of the island of Heligoland are caving in with startling rapidity. For years the sea has been steadily encroaching on this little island and all that was left of the bathing beach has been almost completely claimed by the sea as its own. Recently a huge slice of approximately 3,000 cubic yards plunged into the sea with a terrific roar.

The villa of a prominent Berlin banker, just completed, is now seriously imperiled, while an adjoining building is being torn down. A solitary garden pavilion hangs on the verge of the precipice as though at any moment it might drop into the depths below.

As the erosions of the waves have of late produced a number of deep crevices in the rocks, it has been found necessary to close the public road over the cliffs.

Give Balfour Scrolls of Ezra and Nehemiah

Jerusalem.—The full text of Ezra and Nehemiah, the two historical records of the Bible that might be termed the "Balfour declaration" of Cyrus, king of Persia, on the return of the Jewish people from Babylon to Palestine, were presented to Lord Balfour. The texts, written in scrolls of parchment, were given to the author of the Balfour declaration by the Zionist executive.

In presenting the scrolls to Lord Balfour in an impressive ceremony, Dr. Chaim Weizmann thanked him on behalf of the Jewish people for his continuous friendship and devotion to the cause of rebuilding Palestine as the Jewish national home.

HO! FOR THE LIFE OF A COWBOY

(From a drawing by N. C. Wyeth in Scribner's Magazine.)

Ever eat beans ("Mexican strawberries") dished up from a chuck wagon? Ever sleep out with a saddle for a pillow? It's a great life—if you like it, say the cowboys.

Thousands of Americans, who want to see how real western cowhands live and play, are planning to attend the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo beginning August 15. Cowboys from every part of the West will be on hand for this great western spectacle, which will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. For nine days Chicago's big Grant Park Stadium will look like a scene from the "Covered Wagon days" as the scores of expert bronk riders, lariat throwers and steer wrestlers show their stuff while competing for $30,000 prize money and world championship titles. Tex Austin, who has staged so many successful contests, including the great international contest at Wembley, England, will direct the Chicago event.

KEEPING WELL

BACTERIOLOGY IN THE KITCHEN

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

MOST people think of germs or microbes as awful things which produce disease. So they are, some of them.

But there are also good germs that work for man when he knows enough to let them.

Pasteur, in 1862, showed that the air and the soil are full of germs of all kinds, some of which he proved are the cause of fermentation and some of the diseases of animals and men.

At once, scientific men all over the world began to look for these little creatures. They found many different kinds and they also were able to explain by them many everyday things which had for centuries been misunderstood.

When the housewife in the kitchen mixes her dough for bread, she puts in a small amount of yeast. Why? Because she knows from her mother's teaching and from her own experience that the bread won't "rise" unless the yeast is put in.

What is yeast? The human race has used it for ages. When the angels came to visit Lot, before they destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, he gave them "unleaven bread," that is, bread made without yeast. God commanded the children of Israel, through Moses, that the feast of the Passover was to be of unleaven bread, because they were not to wait even for the bread to rise before leaving Egypt. Everyone knew for centuries that yeast was needed to make bread rise, but no one knew why.

In 1879, Housen and Pasteur showed that yeast was a little plant which grew very rapidly in warm, moist dough; that as it grew, it gave off carbonic acid gas. The gas made little bubbles in the dough and so made it light.

Pasteur found that there were different kinds of yeast. Some made sweet bread, some made sour. He showed the bakers how to make pure yeast which would always make sweet bread.

Fermentation was another mystery. Why did fruit and vegetable juices ferment and turn sour? Pasteur found that it was due to little plants floating in the air; that if the fruit was heated so as to kill any of these plants that may be in it and then put in airtight cans or jars, it would keep without spoiling.

Every housekeeper, when she bakes bread or puts up fruit, is running a practical bacteriological laboratory and is using the knowledge which Pasteur gave the world.

Before Pasteur's time there wasn't a can of fruit, vegetable or meat in the world.

Today, we can every year millions of pounds of food for future use.

The Reverend Had a Little Lamb!

The pastor of a colored church in Tennessee was haled before the board of deacons on serious charges. It was alleged that although married he had been caught in the act of embracing a comely female member of the congregation, in the vestry room. The evidence against him appeared to be conclusive. Three presumably unbiased witnesses testified to the fact.

The accused was asked whether he had anything to say in his own defense. He answered at length and with eloquence. He led off by pointing out that the word "pastor" was a Latin word meaning "shepherd." Therefore, he properly was a shepherd. He also called the attention of the court to the fact that in pictures and paintings and more frequently in stained-glass memorial windows the Master Himself was shown as a shepherd carrying a lamb.

Now then, he contended, it naturally followed that when he, as the shepherd, took a member of his flock in his arms, he merely was carrying out the scriptural example.

In the minds of the deacons there seemed to be no way of controverting these arguments. Accordingly they went into executive session and drew up resolutions exonerating the preacher. But they added a proviso.

The concluding clause of the document, as read by the senior deacon before the congregation on the following Sunday night, ran as follows:

"And be it finally resolved dat in future, ef our beloved pastor should feel de desire stealin' over him to tek one of de lambs of de flock in his arms, dat he shall tek a ram lamb!"

Putting Nature to Work

Ever since the first man peeked fearfully down into the caldron of the first volcano and shuddered at its heat it has been a forward-looking dream to harness this power. Some do it.

There is a super-heated, 230-degree spring at Vale, Ore., that could steam locomotives for even crack trains like the Empire State express. Boise, Idaho, is largely heated by natural hot water; in snowy weather one may follow the buried hot water pipes dry shod all over town, into thousands of homes. The Idaho mountain town of Mackay has two water supplies; a cold spring for summer use, and a piping hot, non-freezing spring to hitch on for winter.

At Klamath Falls, Ore., almost within gunshot of where Captain Jack and his Modocs did such terrible things to the American army, hot springs heat the houses on one of the fine residential hills. The hot water is individual property, like soil fertility or trees; each householder has his own hot well and he never needs a fire except for cooking.—Charles J. Lisle in Collier's.

Flared Skirt and Marked Waistline

Tubular Silhouette, Boyish Simplicity, Doomed by Paris Designers.

The final Paris openings served principally to consign the tubular silhouette of last season and its invariable accompanist—boyish simplicity—to the dark caverns of oblivion. The outstanding themes of the later exhibitions, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, were the flared skirt, a marked waistline and the molded bodice, and, although many salons omitted one and even two of these ideas, at least one of the triumvirate appeared in each collection—and obviously only one is necessary to terminate the tubular silhouette. Brief summaries of the final Paris openings are appended.

It would be patently stretching a point to describe the Callot showing as one which emphasized all of the spring departures. The collection was so large that it naturally included most of the new themes, but none of these was made a significant feature. The skirt is short and it often terminates in a hemline flare as a result of an added flounce. The waistline is not particularly in evidence, except in several period models which exploit a slightly lower than normal line. Molded lines are generally adhered to, except, of course, in some bouffant formal gowns. The lavish ornamentation which has become the custom in Paris robes du soir this season is again sponsored by Callot, who uses lace and embroidery in her interpretations. Ensembles and tailleurs occupy prominent places in this collection, a significant trimming on the former being the lace or chiffon jabot. The outstanding color note is light except where dual color combinations are employed.

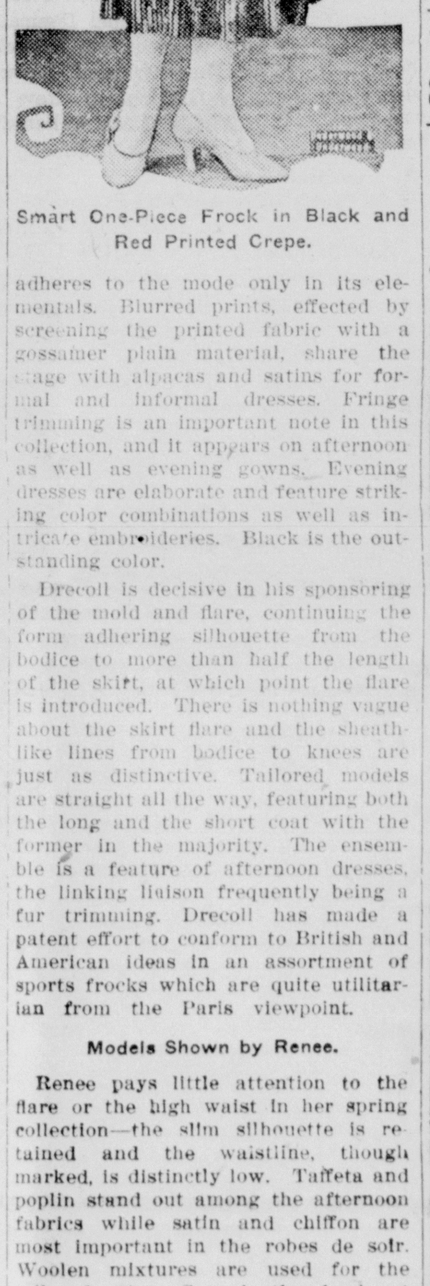
Lanvin's Ideas for Spring.

Jeanne Lanvin has never been noted for a strict conformity to the tenets of the mode, and her present collection wanders as far afield as ever. There is added width to the skirt, achieved principally through the circular cut and through plaited effects, but there is little evidence of molded lines or a distinctly marked waist. The jumper sports frock, always typically Lanvin, remains one of the noteworthy features of this collection, the new models comprising a long jumper and a plaited skirt. In many instances woolen capes accompany sweater-jumpers. Sports hosiery frequently matches the color of the accompanying frock or suit. The tailored suit appears usually in gray mixtures and shows a preference for the short jacket. Bouffant period effects are developed in taffeta and trimmed with ribbons after the traditional robe de style manner of Lanvin. Printed crepes, foulards, taffetas, chiffons and satins are employed by this house, the outstanding colors being red, blue and a shade which is a blending of green and yellow. Painted designs appear on several daytime frocks.

A marked waistline—sometimes high, sometimes low and occasionally normal—and a definitely wider skirt are the principal new tendencies of the Cheruit collection. The added width to the skirt is arrived at by means of flounces, plaits and godets and it is most manifest toward the abbreviated hemline. There is little of the molded effect apparent except in the hiplength jackets of the tailleurs. Three-quarter length coats also accompany the tailored suit. Printed designs and two-tone effects characterize the fabrics, among which surah, taffeta, crepe de chine and chiffon are noteworthy. The evening silhouette is a little longer than its daytime prototype and a lot more elaborate. Scarfs, embroideries and metallic brocades are the principal means of ornamentation.

Premet departs from the tubular silhouette in such a moderate manner that many of the models still give the impression of the straight, slim contour of recent seasons. There are definite tendencies, however, toward a high, marked waistline and fairly full skirt, the latter achieved principally through plaiting and flounces. Skirts, incidentally, are quite short. Tailored suits and sports frocks were prominent in this collection, the former consisting of either long or short coats, short straight skirts and tailored blouses, while the latter invariably combined a jumper blouse and a plaited skirt.

A wide skirt and a frequently marked normal waistline are the significant contributions of Madeleine Vionnet to the new spring fashions. This house presents, as always, an extremely individualistic assortment of frocks which adheres to the mode only in its elementals. Blurred prints, effected by screening the printed fabric with a gossamer plain material, share the stage with alpacas and satins for formal and informal dresses. Fringe trimming is an important note in this collection, and it appears on afternoon as well as evening gowns. Evening dresses are elaborate and feature striking color combinations as well as intricate embroideries. Black is the outstanding color.



Smart One-Piece Frock in Black and Red Printed Crepe.

Drecoll is decisive in his sponsoring of the mold and flare, continuing the form adhering silhouette from the bodice to more than half the length of the skirt, at which point the flare is introduced. There is nothing vague about the skirt flare and the sheath-like lines from bodice to knees are just as distinctive. Tailored models are straight all the way, featuring both the long and the short coat with the former in the majority. The ensemble is a feature of afternoon dresses, the linking liaison frequently being a fur trimming. Drecoll has made a patent effort to conform to British and American ideas in an assortment of sports frocks which are quite utilitarian from the Paris viewpoint.

Ensemble Suit of Black Faille—Blouse of Dull Red Crepe.

Models Shown by Renee.

Renee pays little attention to the flare or the high waist in her spring collection—the slim silhouette is retained and the waistline, though marked, is distinctly low. Taffeta and poplin stand out among the afternoon fabrics while satin and chiffon are most important in the robes de soir. Woolen mixtures are used for the tailored suits. Gray is the dominant color of the tailleur which is of the English type and generally favors the short jacket. The jumper frock, of course, leads all the sports models, while the ensemble is still a feature of daytime clothes. Trimmings are scarce—they are replaced by fabrics, hand painted in designs which are essentially modernistic—notably cubist floral effects, animal motifs and bizarre geometric figures.

Generally straight lines characterize the Doeuillet silhouette, although there is a frequent tendency to gradually widen the skirt through the manipulation of plaits. The tailored suit of British woolens is second in importance only to the ensemble. Printed silks are a typical means of carrying out the ensemble identity, while the tailored suit usually features a short jacket having box plaits. Plaits, incidentally, are perhaps the most significant feature of this collection.

Daytime dresses of one designer are typical of the spring tendencies of the mode. The skirt is definitely wider and there is a distinct waistline which occurs at a higher than normal point. Each of these characteristics is usually confined to the front portion of the frock, the back remaining straight and molded. The tailored suit and the ensemble occupy important places with this house, the former usually accompanied by a short coat and the latter by a three-quarters-length model. The jumper frock and the cape ensemble are among other features of the daytime costume. Sinuous lines characterize the evening gowns, and these are often attained through girdles which are draped over the hips. Bustle effects are also introduced in robes du soir.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

VETERAN DOG FUNNY FACE DIES ON JOB

Was Stickler for Safety First and Always Barked at Dinner Time.

Funny Face, veteran Pennsylvania railroad dog, is dead. He died on the job.

Moist eyes, of which strong men were not ashamed, were exhibited a few days ago while several trackman on the Pennsylvania railroad assisted tenderly in the burial of their daily companion of more than 14 years at a selected spot along the Butler branch of the Ft. Wayne division near North Manchester, Indiana.

More than 14 years ago, Funny Face, just a big friendly dog, appeared at the car house where J. H. Ream foreman, and his men assembled each morning to go out to work on the tracks. No one knew where he came from and no one cared. The foreman adopted him as one of the "hands," and thereafter Funny Face, as one of the trackmen described him the first day, always accompanied the gang wherever it went.

The dog never failed to bark an announcement promptly at 11:30 o'clock each day that it was dinner time, and this was regarded as his cleverest stunt by the trackmen, altho he also gave strong indications that he was a stickler for Safety First, like all good railroaders. He crossed many bridges in his days on the railroad, but no trackman ever saw him start over a bridge without first having looked in both directions.

HIP FRACTURED IN FALL

CLASS OF 1900 HAD REUNION FRIDAY NIGHT

A most delightful affair was the reunion of the class of 1900 of Everts High school held at The Boggs Friday evening, July 3.

At the time of the graduation the class numbered twenty-eight, sixteen of these were present. Two of the members died a number of years ago; they were Mabel Secrest Laughlin and Nina Stewart Gee. The table was decorated with baskets of blue and yellow flowers, also bud vases here and there. In the basket in the center was placed a flag of tan and blue, the class colors, in the field of which were two gold stars, a tribute to the departed classmates. This was made and presented by Maude Nooks Howard, who gave an original poem in memoriam.

The place cards were miniature diplomas, tied with the colors, which upon being opened revealed a bit of personal humor in verse. The color scheme was also carried out in the four course dinner.

The president, M. Earl Warner, of Detroit, Michigan, very cleverly acted as toastmaster and each one responded with much wit and humor, on the subject assigned, many of the subjects being those used at commencement. The program was:

Song—School Days
A Contrast ..Emma Dreisbach Crites
The Boys ..... Samuel Denman
The Girls Mary Wasserstrom Koroch
Class History..Mary Hammel Horton
Class Phophecy—Original and Revvised .....Vinnie Clark Kellstadt
Boys Trio—Silver Threads Among the Gold
Pickaway—Progeny and Progress.. ..... Nell Sapp Phillips
The Bachelor Marathon—How I Accomplished It ....Frank Hamilton
False Faces....Myrtle Christy Wolf
Sextette—Remembering .
Sands on the Journal .....
..... Maude Nooks Howard
Our Class, a Boast .....
..... Mary Emily Wilder
Our Contribution to Education ...
..... Ella Seall Nave
Some Twenty Years Ago .....
..... Mayme McMahon Shaner
Push ..... Cora Rader Hood
The Spirit of the Age .....
..... Pearl James Adkins
Florence Hoffman—Valedictory

The class president spoke on the class motto—"No Struggle, No Victories."

Letters from the absent members were read by the secretary. They were from Mrs. Anna Nichols Dreisbach, California; Fayne Row, Pueblo Colorado; Ollie Lucas Toole, Jamaica, Long Island; Lou Nickerson, Cleveland; I. Lutz May, Virginia; Mary Rindsfoos Caldwell, Columbus; Ethel Collier Styron, Columbus; Pearl Judy Cleveland; Gertrude Pontious and Marguerite Clark, of this city.

It was a very happy occasion after twenty-five years of separation to talk over the good old school days, and it was voted to have another reunion in five years.

Boy Held as Chattel Released by Judge

Detroit, Mich.—Ruling that a human being could not, under the law, be held as chattel or security for the payment of a bill, Judge Vincent M. Brennan in the Circuit court restored three-year-old Edward Thomas Lambert to his mother, Mrs. Mattie May Lambert. Edward early last fall became a $5-a-week boarder at the home of Patrolman Fred Janneck, 133 Cherry street, Wyandotte.

"My husband did not want him," she told Drolzhagen when she went to appeal to recover her son. "But my husband left me last November. I could not keep up the payments. Easter Sunday I owed $50."

She went Easter Sunday to the Janneck home to plead for the child. She would pay the $50 when she could. The Jannecks refused to surrender the boy.

Polozker, who is a practicing attorney, volunteered to act as counsel for her and instituted habeas corpus proceedings.

The law is the law and a mother is a mother. Judge Brennan told Mrs. Lambert to pay Edward's board bill as soon as she could.

"Make your husband pay it if you can find him," he said.

SCOTTISH PLAIDS OF MANY COLORS

National Costume Distinguished for Bright Hues.

Everyone has heard of Scotch plaid, but perhaps there are not many who know what a Scotch plaid really is. In Gaelic, the word is "pellaid," and means a sheepskin or hide. From this is derived the Gaelic "plaide," meaning a blanket. So you see that the plaid is in reality a piece of material, and not a pattern, as we think of it.

The plaid is also called "tartan," and as a garment is worn by both men and women in Scotland, where it forms an important part of the national costume. The peculiar patterns, consisting of crossbars of stripes of various colors, are said formerly to have distinguished the Scottish Highland clans, each clan having its own particular plaid.

Do you remember in your Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake," how "Roderick threw down his target and his plaid"? Thus, it is plain that the plaid is a garment or shawl woven in the check patterns of a peculiar kind, but the terms have become confused, and so used interchangeably. Sometimes you will hear a shawl referred to as a plaid, and just as frequently, the pattern on it is called a tartan.

Some of the clans had more than one plaid, for use on different occasions. For instance, the royal Stuart has a plaid of bright red foundation, squared off with greenish bars, interspersed with narrow black and white stripes. But the Stuart "hunting plaid" has a green foundation blocked with black and blue crossings, with an overplaiding of red and yellow. At the same time there is a "dress Stuart" which has a white foundation, and plaidings of red, blue, black and yellow.

For the most part, these real Scottish plaids are made up of simple colorings, a bright red, a canary yellow, dark purple, dark bluish green, with a black, and a white. Of course, wherever the different stripes cross each other in the plaids, a modified blend of these colors will appear. Naturally the dye-pots of the ancient clansmen were mixed from the plants native to their beloved heaths. There is the black from the alder-tree bark and dock-root; blue from the blueberry and elderberry; crimson from the dark lichens; and green from the broom, thistle, heather and wild cress. The dyes produced in the old ways were very fast in color, and it is said that many of them are still produced in the Highlands.

Naturally, when a design has been as omnipresent as the plaids this season, there is always a great deal of interest aroused as to its origin in history and story. And while it may not always be possible, or even desirable, to reproduce the exact patterns of the various clans, generally the colorings have been more or less faithfully adhered to in order to give to our modern plaiding the name of "Scotch plaid."

Decries "Junk" in Abbey

The proposal to overhaul Westminster abbey so that more of its treasures and beauties may be revealed has led C. W. R. Nevison, an English artist, to remark that the abbey is more like a department store than a church.

The opinion that some of the most beautiful things in the abbey cannot be seen because of the overcrowded memorial statuary is shared by many lovers of the historic building, including Canon Westlake, the abbey historian.

"The proper course is to get rid of some of the ecclesiastical junk at present in the abbey," Mr. Nevison said. "I think it could be cleaned out without offending anybody's susceptibilities. Ultimately many beautiful things could be discovered which cannot now be seen."—Westminster Gazette.

Odd Way to Bring Rain

Rain-making is supposedly achieved by novel methods by peasants in the Punjab. An investigator into customs and methods visited a village where it had not rained for a long time. The anxious women of the village gathered around the officer's tent and requested to be allowed to souse him with water, as they believed that the performance of such a rite would bring down rain at once. The official refused to be drenched, for two days, but he gave way on the third. Twenty pots of water were poured on the unwilling head of the official outside his tent, and after 24 hours the rain came.

Horse to Live in History

The skeleton of the famous racehorse, Tracery, bred by August Belmont at Lexington, Ky., has been presented to the Yorkshire Philosophical society and is now exhibited in that society's museum at York, England. Tracery won nearly $100,000 in stakes during his racing career. He was sold in 1920 to Senor Unzus of Buenos Aires for $265,000, the largest sum ever paid for a racehorse. He was taken back to England in July, 1923, and died at the Cobham stud, Surrey, four months later.

Newspaper "Elevation"

Little Bobbie Knotts was trying to get a drink, but could not reach the bucket, which sat on the cabinet. So he put a newspaper on the floor and stood on it. When questioned as to why he stood on the newspaper, he said that he couldn't reach the bucket, so he thought the paper would make im higher.—Indianapolis News.

YOUNGSTERS IN CLUB CAMP THIS SUMMER

Farm Boys and Girls From 44 Counties Arrange for Week's Recreation.

In 44 of Ohio's 88 counties close to 2500 farms boys and girls will take a week off this summer to go camping at county club camps directed by county extension agents and agricultural extension service of the Ohio State university. Last year 30 Ohio counties sponsored club camps.

Some of the campers will go as guests of county organization because of their achievements as members of farm boys' and girls' clubs. Most of them, however, will pay their own way.

The camps will differ just as the counties differ, says O. C. Croy, acting state club leader at the State university, but in all of them this idea will prevail. Youngsters go camping to enjoy themselves, for recreation more than for instruction.

"While each camp must have sufficient supervision and discipline," Mr. Croy continues, "each camp program must be flexible enough to allow the camper to recreate pretty much as he or she wants to. A guiding principle will be to help people develop their own talent in recreation."

As an aid to the county extension and volunteer leaders who will direct these 44 county camps, Ohio will again this year have a state camp for boys' and girls' farm club leaders at Camp Nelson Dodd, Knox county, the state Y. M. C. A. camp. About 200 leaders, most of them volunteer, unpaid workers from the counties, will attend this camp the week of July 13 to learn how to run a camp.

AMERICAN AS SPOKE

Britisher—What do Americans mean by "giving a man the air"?

American—Tying a can to him, putting the skids under him, giving him the gate. Get it?

Britisher—I hear you, old top. But please explain your bally explanation.

THE MOTHER AT ARMS

I nursed him thru the perilous infant years,
Thru childish ailments of all shapes and kinds
Wake when he tossed in fever—
—watched his pulse,
And laid cool fingers on his burning head.
Now, all these pitfalls passed, behold—a man!
I draw a long, deep breath,
But Nature smiles
In pitless irony; I hear her say:
"So far, O mother, you have guarded him;
But think not to escape mine ancient power;
Soon will he know a fever of the soul
No anodyne of thine canst calm or cool;
Love waits for him a little down the road—
The Road of Life."
And I say bitterly:
"I can protect him even from that pang;
For I will teach him what I learned of Love—
How it is but the mask of Selfishness—
A trap of iron, covered deep with flowers;
I'll teach him all the signs of lurking Love,
So he may be accountered for the fray;
Show him my wounds—the scars upon my breast—
And tell him:
"O my Son; I lost the fight;
But you are strong and brave; heed what I say,
And you are free to win Life's richest prize,
Unhandicapped by clogs upon your arms—
A wife and children who will drag you down
When you aspire to rise, and ask for dross
When your enraptured soul would seek the stars!"
Thus do I fling my women's gauntlet down
To the dark Fates who spin, and weave, and cut
The Thread of Life—and they make no reply."
—New York Times.

KIND HEARTS.

Often when I'm gayly driving, hitting up some twenty miles in the hope of soon arriving, I have grief in many styles. For my flivver's old and battered and her engine's out of whack, and she's always wildly scattered bolts and castings on the track. When she gasps and quits her chooing I descend, with aching heart, and gadzooking and beshrewing, try to fix the tended down to his chin. Dr. D. V. worst mechanic, and you couldn't find my mate if you searched from York to Yaanek, if you combed your native state. Underneath the auto creeping, soon I sprain my neck and knee, and I spring unmanly weeping that is pitiful to see. Then some fellow comes a-looping down the highway in his car and beholds me madly groping in the oil and grease and tar. And he halts his prancing Lizzie and remarks, "You're old and fat, you are spavined bald and dizzy, and unfit for work like that. Crawl away and drink a flagon of cold water from the rill; I will fix your busted wagon with the heartiest good will. When I'm old and fat and flabby and my bus is on the blink, and the luck seems dark and shabby, there may come some helpful gink; there may come some kindly voter who will say, as I say now, "I will fix your locoed motor, while you rest and bathe your brow.' " When he's fixed my twisted fender I remark, as off I trot, "Hearts are just as kind and tender as they ever were, I wot."—Walt Mason.

Bottle Manufacture

When a bottle is shaped and drops out of the machine at a dull red heat it is not finished. If allowed to cool in the open air at such a temperature it will break. For this reason the hot bottles are run slowly through an oven called a lehr, where they cool gradually. They are then ready for use.

LEWIS HENN PASSED AWAY AT HIS HOME

Well Known Truck Gardener Died Friday---Funeral Services Monday.

Lewis Henn, son of the late Jacob and Margaret Schneider Henn, was born in Circleville, Ohio, October 13, 1855, and died July 3, 1925, at his home in Pickaway county, where he had been engaged in gardening and trucking business for the past thirty years.

He was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Dunkel March 1, 1881, who with seven children survive namely; Willis, Edward, Marie, wife of Philip Glenn, Cora, Ethel, Marvine and Roy, at home.

He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Catherine Arnold. He leaves seven grandchildren, besides a number of nephews and nieces and other relatives and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss.

The funeral services were held from the home this afternoon at 2 o'clock conducted by Rev. G. J. Troutman. Burial in Forest cemetery.

WHITE DIARRHEA. SAVE THEM

Ashville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1.
May 7, 1924.

Mr. Fickardt:—

I bought 400 chicks. Very soon the chicks began to die of WHITE DIARRHEA. My chicks kept on dying until I had lost 250 in two weeks.

At that time I had ten sick chicks and I really considered them as good as dead. I began to use your remedy with all my chicks, both well and sick. Eight of the sick chicks recovered and I have not lost any others since I began the use of Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops over a month ago.

I would have probably thought that disease had run its course, if it had not been for the fact that those that were sick recovered; but seeing the sick ones get well has convinced me that your remedy cured them.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN ON TO PREVENT DROWNINGS

Safety Council Plans Comprehensive Effort to Reduce the Annual Toll of Lives.

Chicago.—"Help to prevent drownings."

That is the slogan which will be broadcast throughout the country this summer by the National Safety Council in a comprehensive effort to reduce the toll of lives in accidental drownings.

Approximately 6,500 persons were drowned in continental United States last year, the council estimates. Modern educational methods and publicity on the subject have reduced the annual toll from 8,800, the number drowned in 1911. A large part of the credit for this reduction is due the American Red Cross, which has promoted life-saving activities of various sorts in communities large and small.

This summer the National Safety Council will add the organized effort of 60 large cities having a total population in excess of 30,000,000 which have affiliated community safety councils.

The safety councils of these cities will extend the campaign into the public and parochial schools, into the homes and into the industries. Swimming posters will be displayed the country over in an effort to interest people in learning how to swim. The prone-pressure method of resuscitation, recognized as the most efficient system of restoring breathing in the apparently drowned will be taught along with ways and means of rescuing helpless persons from lakes and rivers.

Thirty of the country's largest radio stations will broadcast talks on the prevention of drownings.

"There is no doubt but that the ability to swim is of first importance if the drownings in this country are to be reduced," says W. F. Cameron, managing director of the council. "Everyone, young and old, should get out this summer and learn how. Especially should children be taught because swimming becomes harder to learn as the person grows older. Besides, swimming is wonderful exercise and develops the muscles and tissues of the body into a suppleness not accomplished by most other forms of recreation."

Sound Filter Will Be Useful in Many Ways

An open tube through which only certain sounds can pass has been devised by Dr. G. W. Stewart of the University of Iowa, based on his newly discovered principle that sound waves can be made to interfere with each other, causing only certain tones to be transmitted. He calls the device an acoustic filter. Since it is of a fundamental nature, it is believed to have possibilities in connection with phonographs, loud speakers, telephones automobile mufflers and like appliances. The photograph shows Professor Stewart with the acoustic filter.

Greatest Lighthouse in World Is Started

Paris.—What is stated to be the most powerful lighthouse in the world was inaugurated on the summit of Mont Afrique in Burgundy for the purpose of facilitating night trips on the Paris-Marseilles air line.

The lighthouse has eight lights, with a total of 1,000,000,000 candlepower. If atmospheric conditions are favorable its powerful rays will be seen from Lille, Brussels, Frankfort and Milan.

Despite the heavy expense incurred for building the lighthouse, which cost the government over $100,000, it is expected that four more will be put up during the year in order to enable the air lines to run day and night services throughout the country.

Arab Fashion on Links

Paris.—Chiseled leather coats, edged and lined with wool, are to be the fashion for women's wear on the golf links and tennis courts this spring. The idea comes from the skilfully worked saddles of some Arab chiefs, and the delicate leather work is being done by Moorish artists.

NEW SECTIONS TO RULES OF ADJUSTMENT

Of Loss for Diseased Cattle Slaughtered—Effective July First.

At a meeting held late last week at the office of Director of Agriculture, Charles V. Traux, the State Board of Agriculture approved and adopted two sections that were submitted to be added to the present Rules of Compensation for Slaughtered Cattle. These sections go into effect July 1st and their form as approved by the Board is as follows:

Section 6. Each reacting or tuberculous animal shall be appraised at its true value. In making such appraisal, the fact that the animal has been condemned for disease shall not be considered. The owner or owners thereof shall be paid two-thirds of the difference between the appraised value and the value of the gross salvage thereof, which shall include the sum paid by the Ohio Department of Agriculture; provided in no case shall payment by both the Ohio Department of Agriculture and the U. S. Department of Agriculture be more than $80 for any pure bred or $50 for any grade animal.

Section 12. Definite indemnity for tuberculosis cattle can be allowed and in accordance with Section 1121-10 of the General Code, an appraisal must be made by a representative chosen by the owner and a representative chosen by the Department, and in the event of a disagreement, a third disinterested person shall be selected at the owner's expense by the two to act with them in the appraisal of the cattle.

In making an appraisal, the true value of the animal shall be determined and such value shall be based upon breeding, dairy or beef type and settlement of the claim shall be made as provided in Section 6 of these rules of Compensation, and in making such appraisal, the fact that the animal has been condemned for disease, shall not be considered.

PADRE'S HAT IS FOUND IN "LOST" MEXICAN GOLD MINE

Famous Old Cockroach Workings Rediscovered After Being Hidden More Than Century.

Yago, Nayarit, Mexico.—In the famous old Cucaracha (Cockroach) mine, near here, recently rediscovered after being hidden for a century and a quarter, miners are bringing up evidence of the Spanish padres who once owned these approaches to rich veins of gold.

One of the discoveries was a large felt hat, in a remarkable state of preservation. It resembles pictures of the headgear worn by Friar Tuck of nursery fable fame. It has a very broad and floppy brim and was made of a fine grade of thick hair felt, colored brown. Despite its burial for more than 125 years its fibers still are strong and appear equal to any used in modern hats.

The workmen have found also portions of blankets and garments, showing fine material and weaving. The texture of these articles is far superior to the crude Indian and Mexican weave of the period, and this is regarded as certain evidence that the owners were alien conquerors who brought the stuff from Europe.

The padre mine operators were driven out of Mexico about 1812 and never permitted to return. Though the Cockroach mine was well known, its location remained a mystery until, recently, an American mining engineer found it by accident.

Legend tells that the retreating Spaniards buried many bars of pure gold and silver in the vicinity of the Cockroach, and this tradition adds zest to the work of the miners.

BOOK MADE HIDING PLACE FOR PISTOL

While visiting in an old farmhouse in West Virginia, writes a contributor to the Youth's Companion, I discovered between the covers of a book a curious reminder of the Civil war. I had been looking over some volumes that had been slowly accumulating through three generations. There were several textbooks of former days—among them was a thick octavo, "Anglecta Graeca Majora," bound in stout leather; it was perhaps a hundred years old. The work was in Greek and had a Latin preface.

Idly turning over the pages, I found two or three hundred leaves that were cut in a peculiar manner. For a moment I was puzzled why the book should have been so mutilated. Then I noticed that the hollow made was exactly in the shape of a pistol. The work had evidently been done with a chisel, for the edges were smooth. When the book was closed it looked like any ordinary book; it made an excellent hiding place for a small firearm.

On mentioning the matter to my host I learned that during the Civil war the owner of the house had been suspected of being a Southern sympathizer, and that he had been accused of keeping a large number of firearms upon the place for use if there should be a secessionist uprising. The authorities made frequent visits in search of weapons, and all firearms were seized except one small pistol, which he had concealed in that cunning manner.

GEORGE OTT LAWSUIT HAS ROCKY ROAD

Obtained Two Verdicts but Both Cases were Remanded for New Trial.

The George Ott case has had a long court history and is not finished yet. Ott, who was an employe of the Norfolk & Western railroad company on the night trick at the coaling and water station at Dorney, suffered a broken leg when a lump of coal fell from a car which it was his duty to unload, on January 3, 1922.

Claiming that the negligence of the railroad in not placing sufficient light at this point was due to his injuries, which he said were permanent, Ott filed suit in common pleas court for $20,000 damages.

On Nov. 12, 1923, he received a verdict for $6,000. The railroad appealed the case on error and it was reversed and remanded for a new trial. In the second trial, Ott received a verdict for $5,000 on Nov. 8, 1924. The railroad again prosecuted error and again the judgment has been reversed and the case remanded for a new trial.

In all except the Ott case, Judges Middleton, Mauck and Sayre concurred. In the latter, Sayre dissented from the opinion of the other two judges.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED FOR HARVEST

Tobacco Raiser is Allowed to Gather Crop Before Doing Time.

A large tobacco crop which he is caring for near Rainsboro, Highland county, has saved Edgar Thomas from a 60 day jail sentence in the Darke county jail recently imposed by Federal Judge Hikenlooper, in Cincinnati as result of Thomas entering a plea of guilty to possessing a still and making liquor on his farm.

Learning that the man had a large tobacco crop depending upon his care, Judge Hickenlooper sentenced Thomas to jail for 10 days as part of fine, and suspended the sentence until October 1st, by which time it is expected he will have his tobacco crop safely under shelter.

Thomas originally made his escape from officers by swimming a creek, but after his wife and son were taken into custody he surrendered himself.

AMUSEMENTS

A screen version of Leonid Andreyev's powerful dramatic play, "He Who Gets Slapped," is scheduled to open at the Metropolitan Theatre Monday for a run of three days.

A great deal of interest surrounds this picture for several reasons. Possibly the greatest one is that it is almost the only attempt to picturize Russian literature. Andreyev's play scored a sensational hit when produced on the stage in New York by the Theatre Guild, with Richard Bennett playing the title role, but it never played outside that city.

Interest attaches to the picture because of the fact that it is the second American production of the noted Swedish director and actor, Victor Seastrom, brought to this country by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company a year ago, and heralded by the critics and by other directors as one of the greatest producers of the screen. Seastrom made a decided impression with his first work, "Name the Man." It is thought "He" will give the European an even greater opportunity to display his screen technique and flair for drama than did his first vehicle.

The picture is also unique in that it brings Lon Chaney to the screen in one of his "straight" characterizations; one in which he is not called upon to use his wizardry of make-up, or his gruesome talent of assuming some physical deformity. Chaney has one of his strongest parts as "He," the tragic circus clown.

Norma Shearer and John Gilbert play the romantic leads, with such names as Tully Marshall, Marc McDermott, Ford Sterling, Clyde Cook, Paulette Duval, Harvey Clarke, George Davis, Ruth King and Brandon Hurst in the supporting cast.

Prevent "Whiskers" on the Strawberry

Film Designed to Help in War on Black Mold.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Why Strawberries Grow Whiskers" is the title of a new United States Department of Agriculture film on the handling of strawberries, just completed by the office of motion pictures for the bureau of plant industry.

The fact that strawberries do grow whiskers may be new to many consumers, but it is old stuff to the strawberry trade; indeed one of the prime objects in the life of the strawberry shipper is to prevent the growth of "whiskers" on the strawberries he handles. Hence this new film—which is designed to help the strawberry grower and shipper in their war against black mold, the fungus which is responsible for strawberry "leak" and for the "whiskers" which signalize the final stage of this disease.

The lesson taught by the film may be boiled down into three very brief admonitions to the grower:

1. Handle strawberries carefully.
2. Pick early in the day, while the berries are cool.
3. Refrigerate promptly after picking.

The photography emphasizes the fact that infection from black mold is due largely to bruises and cuts on the berry, and that subsequent growth of the mold is much more rapid in warm air than in cold air.

An interesting feature of this film is a long-time motion picture showing the growth of black mold, covering a period of twenty-four hours or more in a few seconds of projection on the screen.

"Why Strawberries Grow Whiskers" is in one reel and will be circulated through the educational film service of the department and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods, or may be purchased at the laboratory charge. A complete list of the department's films, with information on the method of distributing them, is given in Miscellaneous Circular 27, which may be obtained on application to the department at Washington.

Acid Phosphate Checks Many Losses in Manure

What is the best preservative to prevent plant food losses in manure? Many recommendations have been made, but the latest investigations on this subject show acid phosphate to be the most efficient and most practicable material to use. Acid phosphate proved to be more efficient in preventing nitrogen losses than did straw, peat, rock phosphate, or gypsum.

Not only does acid phosphate check the loss of nitrogen, but it materially increases the fertilizing value of manure, supplying the element of plant food in which manure is lacking. The use of acid phosphate with manure is one of the soundest of fertilizer practices.

The spreading of one or two handfuls of acid phosphate in each stall each day is a very practical method. Tramping of the stock mixes it with the manure. Even when manure is hauled out and spread immediately, there is some loss of nitrogen which is avoided if the manure is phosphated.

Grape Vines Pruned in Early Spring Is Best

Grapevines should be pruned before the buds begin to swell in order to avoid the great loss of sap which follows late pruning. Best results usually follow heavy pruning.

"As much old wood as is possible to remove should be taken away," says W. H. Alderman, head of the division of horticulture, University of Minnesota, "leaving only a few short canes of last year's growth to carry the crop for the coming season. The sooner this pruning is done the better, but if for some reason it is not done until early spring, one should still prune vines vigorously.

"Even though heavy bleeding results from belated pruning, the slight loss in vigor caused by the loss in sap will not be as serious as would be the failure to prune at all."

Phone Girls Keep Smile Through Proper Rest And Play Periods . Each Memorizes 5,000 Names

A CHANGE CORNER

RELAXATION

Match your memory against any one of these telephone operators and discover how feeble are your powers of retention. To be as familiar with more than 5,000 names and the corersponding telephone numbers as with their A B C's is just one part of their job.

At the home office of the Prudential Insurance Company, Newark, N. J., numbers are not used for intra-office or district agency calls. The girls at the switchboard have to memorize more than 5,000 names of the people using the 573 extensions and also the district office numbers. And there is never a complaint that the smile in the voice has grown wan or lost its appealing charm.

The average number of calls each working day at this big insurance company runs between five and six thousand. The records show that one operator has had as many as 1,133 calls in one day and another had 1,600.

How do they keep the smile in the voice under the pressure of such work? They have the best of care and are never permitted to get over-tired at the board. They feel no ill results because of the regular rest periods and the supervision of the medical department. Adjoining the operators' room is a comfortable rest room with a big over-stuffed coach. Twenty minutes in the depths of this gives a tired operator the opportunity for complete relaxation and new energy to go on with her tedious job. Miss Clothilda Klockner, the chief operator, out of her twenty years of experience at the Prudential, has learned to forestall illness by watching her girls for signs of fatigue. By giving them prompt relief she has been remarkably successful in avoiding absences due to illness. Girls are never permitted to work when suffering from bronchial troubles or under conditions that might impair their general health.

Solving The Vacationists' Food Problems

VACATION, like Christmas, comes but once a year. Make the most of it while it's here!

Every one knows that constantly cooking over a hot fire is not making the most of vacation. So unless you are going to a hotel, or some other place where the preparation of meals need not bother you, why not settle your cooking problems with prepared foods?

Food experts tell us when we buy canned foods we buy the best the market has to offer. They are canned while they are at their best, under the most scientific conditions. These foods can always be depended upon for freshness, wholesomeness, delicious taste and protection from contamination and climatic conditions.

When stocking up for the summer vacation it will pay you to look over your grocer's supply of "ready dishes." They are so called because instead of being a single kind of meat or fish, fruit or vegetable in one can, they are dishes composed of several ingredients. Pork and beans, soup, spaghetti, fruit and vegetable salads are examples.

Tomatoes, corn and peas, you will be sure to need in somewhat larger quantity than other things. Other invaluable foods are asparagus and spinach, string or lima beans and sweet potatoes. Of the meats, chicken a la king, plain chicken, corned beef, tongue, dried beef and deviled ham, are suggestions. Salmon, fish flakes, tuna fish and sardines will be useful for fish salads on warm days. Beets and artichokes should be added to the vegetable stock. And don't forget cheese, practically every variety of which comes canned, with the exception of Swiss.

The vacationist can avoid all monotony of food by beginning to think about the food problem early and by checking up on the variety and quantity of each variety. The grocer is always ready to advise.

As Good as a Circus

By ANTHONY REIMERT

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"FIT you? Sure it fit you!" said Barney the tailor. "It fit you like de paper on de vall."

Big Dick, the Only Original American Giant, surveyed the eight feet of his height, as much as he could see of it in Barney's mirror, thoughtfully.

"You see," he said, blushing, "I gotta take a girl to the beach next week on my off day. And I wouldn't like for to look like a cheap skate."

"Sure, dot's so," agreed Barney. "In dot suit de peoples take you for Mr. Pierpont Morgan."

"And it won't shrink?' demanded the Only Original.

"Shrink?" cried Barney in horror. "Vy, dot suit vouldn't lose one ampere in a million years, it's so vell shrunk already."

Satisfied, Big Dick bent low and made his exit from the tailor's shop, followed by the admiring gazes of the crowd as his figure stalked along the street in the direction of the circus.

Hardly had he left when Tiny Tim, the dwarf, thrust his two feet of humanity through the doorway.

"Say, I heard you make a suit for my friend Big Dick," he began.

"Sure, und it fit him like de paper on de vall," said Barney.

"Could you rush me a suit?" asked Tiny Tim, and a blush spread across his face. "I—I'm going to take a girl to the beach next Thursday, and I wouldn't like for to look a cheap skate."

"Sure, I make you a good vun," answered Barney.

Tiny Tim was duly fitted, and surveyed himself in the tailor's mirror.

"It seems kinder loose," he said. "You're sure it won't stretch, Barney?"

"Stretch?" cried Barney in horror. "Dot suit von't stretch one millionth of an inch in a tousand years."

Barney went home. Next morning, as he was about to come to his shop, he received a telephone call from his assistant.

"Say, that big stiff and the little one were down here with clubs looking for you, half an hour ago!" he called. "They tried to bust up the shop and the police reserves were sent for. I beat it just in time."

"Vy, vot's the matter?" demanded Barney.

"I don't know, jest what's wrong, except that the big stiff said his suit had shrunk and he couldn't take his girl to the beach."

"Vy, he must have been out in a shower in it," said Barney.

"And the little one was yelling that his suit had stretched."

"Vell, vat does he expect of a worsted if he gets caught in the rain?" demanded Barney angrily. "Ain't they got no sense, them circus folks?"

He dared not go down to his shop for several hours, but remained mournfully at home, trying to find out how he could stretch his fire insurance policy to cover damages by a mob. In the end, coming to the conclusion that it was impossible, he made a detour down to the shop, and to his joy discovered that the mob had gone.

Except for a cracked window there was nothing amiss. A few bales of cloth had been mishandled, but Barney soon got them back into place.

"Vell, dey ain't done much damage," suggested Barney.

"No, I guess they gone off happy after all."

"How's dot?"

"I don't know, but the little feller he said something to the big feller, and both of 'em grinned and went away."

Barney grunted and thought he had seen the last of them. The circus was leaving next morning, anyway. But that evening, as he was about to close, quite late, to his horror he saw the two appear in his doorway.

"Hey, beat it!" he yelled, snatching up his goose.

"It's all right!"—they cried together. "We come to pay you for the winder. And both our girls is going to marry us."

"Say, vat's the matter mid dem suits?" demanded Barney. "They fits you like de paper on de vall."

"Sure they does," answered Big Dick. "We was both kinder sore at first, but then we decided to change. This is the suit you made for him and that suit Tim's wearing is the one you made for me."

Tolstoy's Opinion of Women.

In a recently published volume of reminiscences, Alexander Borisovich Goldenweiser, a Russian pianist who was an intimate friend of Tolstoy, says that one day the great writer, who was perhaps the greatest feminist of the century, remarked to him:

"If you won't repeat it, I'll tell you confidentially; women are generally so evil that there is scarcely any difference between a good woman and a bad one."

Mr. Goldenweiser apparently does not explain this extraordinary remark, which may have been made in a mood of levity or perhaps when Tolstoy was suffering from indigestion.—Kansas City Star.

For One.

The speaker waxed eloquent, and after his peroration on women's rights, he said: "When they take our girls, as they threaten, away from the co-educational college, what will follow? What will follow I repeat."

And a loud masculine voice in the audience replied, "I will."—Brown Bull.

Justice Tempered With Mercy

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," began the attorney for the defense, "can you look upon the prisoner's tear-stained face and not take pity on her?"

And all six of the ladies on the jury did take pity on her and offered her their cosmetics.—Western Christian Advocate.

Girl Babies Sell at 3 Cents Each in China

Seattle, Wash.—One of the cheapest commodities in certain parts of China is girl babies and many are left at Catholic missions of Jaochow, Kiangsi province, the parents demanding as payment 3 cents in American money, declared Rev. Daniel McGillicuddy, Catholic missionary from Kanchow, province of Kiangsi, who just arrived here on a steamship from Shanghai.

"In addition to paying parents of Chinese girl babies 3 cents, the garments the babies are wrapped in are often asked to be returned," said Father McGillicuddy.

The missionary said missions were protected from fighting Chinese factions by paying small sums to the leaders.

HATCHERYMEN START SCHOOL FOR ONE WEEK

Two Hundred Expected to Enroll in Poultry Improvement Course.

Ohio hatcheryman and farmers whose flocks supply eggs for those hatcheries, will put all their eggs in one basket for at least a week this year.

Beginning Monday, July 6, some 200 hatcherymen and poultrymen will form the student body of a poultry judging school conducted by the Ohio Poultry Improvement association and the Ohio State university for two weeks. A week's school like this was held last year to help hatcherymen, and those who supply hatcheries with eggs, improve the poultry used for breeding.

Professor J. G. Halpin, head of the poultry department at the University of Wisconsin, will assist the State university poultry department in conducting the school. Professor Halpin, in view of his researches at of sunlight on inbreeding and hatchability, and on nutrition problems in Wisconsin, will talk on the influence chick raising.

The first week of the school will be for beginners, or those who were not enrolled last year; the second week for the advanced students. Judging joultry for breed type and characteristics, round-table sessions, and instruction in advertising comprise the course of study.

Certificates will be issued by the Ohio Poultry Improvement association to those owners of accredited hatcheries who pass the examination at the end of the course.

WHY HEN CACKLES AFTER LAYING EGG.

It would appear that in our ignorance of the past, we have long been doing an injustice to the hen. We have generally accepted as an explanation of the cackling in which she indulges after laying an egg, her satisfaction at the completion of the task and her vain and silly desire that everyone shall know it. The rooster's answering crow we have taken as proof that both are immensely proud of the achievement.

Upon a careful examination of the matter it must, however, be admitted that this explanation is hardly tenable. Instinct must have taught the hen that to make a noisy demonstration after laying an egg, is to call the attention of an enemy both to herself and her embryo offspring — a thing she naturally would avoid doing.

There can, therefore be little doubt that the cackle is a relic of bygone days when fowls were not domesticated, but ran wild. At that period when a hen wished to lay an egg, she presumably retired from the rest of the fowl community to do so. But thlastvcle rahtse htsehtse htsh By the time she was ready to rejoin the commonwealth its other members might have wandered some distance and she did not know where they were. Presumably she waited until she had gone sufficiently far from the egg as not to endanger it, and then, after taking a good look around to make sure no enemies were near, set forth her strident cackle. The rooster, hearing the call, answered it with a crow, and thus informed the hen of the whereabouts of the rest. This sort of thing may indeed now be seen among the ancestors of our domestic fowls in the Malay countries and in India.

Recent Tests Show Mary, Queen of Scots, Innocent

London.—An extraordinary feat in modern criminology was achieved when Ainsworth Mitchell, a prominent English scientist often called in as an expert to help solve murder mysteries, proved by an examination of documents and seals that Mary, Queen of Scots, was innocent of the crime for which she was executed 350 years ago, conspiracy to cause the assassination of Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Mitchell put all the old records through the most minute laboratory tests and he used the latest methods in comparing hand yriting and examining evidence.

He declared when he finished that Mary's innocence was unquestionable. He said William Maitland, Mary's private secretary, was her betrayer. According to Mr. Mitchell, the famous casket of letters which resulted in Mary's trial and beheading were written by Mr. Maitland in a disguised handwriting.
